The major objectives of the meeting are to strengthen the cooperation between the research groups from Europe and Asia, and contribute to the general progress of zeolite science at the international level. This new series of meetings in the field of zeolites and other ordered porous materials will be organized alternatively in Asia and Europe on a biannual basis. To be efficient and avoid interference with existing congresses the Euro-Asian zeolite conference will be limited to about 120 participants and take place during the winter season.

The scientific program of this symposium covers various fields of microporous zeolite type materials, metal-organic-frameworks (MOFs) and mesoporous materials, with a specific focus on the fine tuning of their properties, their detailed characterization and new areas of application.

The meeting will include four plenary lectures, five keynote talks and an invited lecture of the IZA ambassador. The scientific program also includes 22 oral presentations (20 min), 12 short oral presentations (10 min, combined with a poster presentation), and 2 poster sessions. The meeting will end with a 90 min round-table discussion for in-depth exchanges between the participants.

Scientific program

The topics of the symposium will include:

- Preparation of porous materials
- Modification and characterization
- Advanced applications
- Catalysis
- Computational modeling
- Environmental chemistry
- Films and membranes
- Host-guest chemistry
